A Greenback Case.

HAVING been compelled to accept of Legal Tender Notes at par since the 17th day of December, 1862, for the rent of my handsome Brick Store, corner of Morrison and Front streets, I feel compelled to announce for the benefit of the public at large, that

Jacob Mayer

Leased the building of me on the 17th day of February, 1862, for a term of years, at which time there was no such currency in vogue, and it was understood the terms were CASH. Since the date above stated I have received the depreciated currency regularly under protest for the rent of the

CITY OF PARIS STORE,

Making less than two-fifths of the real amount said Mayer was to pay. He had secured the building at very advantageous rates, and even were he now to comply with his contract and pay in COIN, would be getting the best bargain in the city. I make this statement to show the public what kind of a man he must be to take such undue advantage of the times, to convert a few dollars to himself by LEGAL SWINDLING. The public can readily see what it costs to have such tenants.

[illegible]

WEDNESDAY MORNING, NOV. 16, 1864.

A Leaf of Early History.

Several weeks ago we published in our columns in the Legislative reports, that, at the Joint Convention of both Houses held during the last days of the session, Mr. [illegible] of Clackamas County, on behalf of numerous citizens of Oregon, presented to the State, through the medium of the Legislature, a tomahawk said to have been used to [illegible] the Whitman family, on the Walla Walla river, in the fall of 1847.

The occasion called forth some interesting remarks from the presiding officers of the Assembly, and Mr. I. R. Moores, Speaker of the House, gave to the world some facts that have never been published and are not generally known, that place the lamented Dr. Whitman before us as one who at an early day appreciated the value of this part of the Federal domain, and underwent much of hardship and personal exposure to preserve it as part and parcel of the soil of the United States.

The story of Dr. Whitman's life, his untiring devotion to the Indian tribes of Eastern Oregon, and of his success in effecting their civilization, at least so far as outward appearance went, is as common as household words to all the people of our State, but the fact we give now is new at least to most of us, and well deserves to be chronicled and remembered.

It was during the inclement season of winter, sometime in the years 1841 or 1842, and during the negotiation of the Ashburton Treaty, that the news came to the scattered settlements of Oregon, that the Government was negotiating a treaty with Great Britain, and that the Territory of Oregon was about to be resigned to English rule.

Deeply impressed with the necessity of retaining this portion of the Northwest, and conscious of its future destiny—knowing also that the Hudson Bay Company for the furtherance of their design, had industriously circulated in eastern circles the idea that the Territory of Oregon was valueless, fit only for the excursions of trappers and hunters, —Mr. Whitman started in the midst of winter, and made the dreary journey across the plains at that inhospitable season, for the sole purpose of thwarting the plans that were devised to wrest this fair region from our Government.

Arriving in Washington in due season, he went to Mr. Webster, then Secretary of State, and represented to him in earnest words, the value that he placed upon our Northwestern possessions. It may be supposed that the man who had taken this long, midwinter journey of 3,000 miles, simply because he feared that the flag of his country might cease to float over his distant home, was not wanting in words—and eloquent words too,—to describe the value he placed on our retaining possession of the Territory of Oregon. There was then no gold discovered in our mountains, no steamers plowing our waters, and the virgin soil of our prairies had scarce commenced to be upturned by the plowshare of civilization.

Barren as so much of it was, the home of savage tribes, and devoid of cultivation, his eye seemed to see, with prophetic vision and responsive to his wish, the school-house and the church and the thousands of comfortable homes that are tokens of the civilization, the intelligence and the wealth we boast to-day.

The polished diplomatist met his earnest expression with a courteous smile, as he said: "Doctor you are too late, we have almost concluded to trade the Northwest coast for a valuable codfishery."

This reply was discouraging, and no better could be expected from the Secretary, but Doctor Whitman was not disheartened by one rebuff.

His next effort was with President Tyler, who deserves at least honorable mention from the people of Oregon, since he heard the Doctor's story with pleasure and fully appreciated the truths he listened to.

The interest thus awakened became general, and the result was a reconsideration of the question of resigning the Northwest coast to English sovereignty, and that we celebrate Union victories to-day upon Federal soil.

Oregon owes much to Dr. Whitman's memory, and her history will have a place reserved for him upon its pages, to chronicle his life and virtue, and lament his untimely end.

Democratic Wrath.—Since the last general clean-out of the Democrats, in Nation, State, county, and precinct, it is very comical to watch the contortions that a few of the faithful endure in defeat. Of course there are some jimsses and some individuals that remember the [illegible] age, and resented the state, but there are some that appear very sore, and boil over with harmless wrath.

The Eugene Review had only a half sheet to pour out its feelings on it last issue. Very likely it did not dare to trust itself with broader range.

Summing up the returns, it says of each county: "the abolition vote last Spring was"—so and so, as if it was vengeance enough for it to cast this word "abolition," at its myriad of foes.

His taking "up arms against a sea of troubles" is right enough. "Pitch in!" But you are behind the times, Review. "Abolition" is no longer a term of reproach. Judging from the last issue, the election abolished one-half of the Review, and time will doubtless abolish the other.

The editor's sensations in getting off his wrath may be "exquisite," but we consider the looks of the thing so "absurdly ridiculous," that we refer him to the Hon. G. W. Lawson for a proper and thrilling description of it. His grief might be relieved by reading a psalm we had in our columns a few days since:

> "Death whispers in the passing breeze,
> He lurks in every flower;
> He nops the cops from east to west,
> To show his wondrous power."

News of the Day.—There is no additional intelligence of the elections at the East, and we may consider yesterday's news correct.

Wasco county, Oregon, seems to have given some 60 majority for McClellan, and we have not a word more from Union and Baker counties. No returns at all from Curry.

Sherman, after all, is not reported [illegible] ton as yet. To-day's news places him in the rear of Hood, and the prospect is that Hood will not easily escape.

A desperate attack on our army in Georgia, by the rebels, intended as a [illegible] was promptly met and bravely repulsed.

The monitor Camanche was successfully launched at San Francisco to-day.

The Eastern line is down this evening, the 15th.

There is no other important news.

The Presidential Contest of the United States.

In the early days of the American Union [illegible] 1788 and 1792.

We have compiled below a table showing the popular vote at the different elections from 1824 inclusive, to the present campaign.

In 1824, Jackson had [illegible]; Adams [illegible]; Clay, 16[illegible]; and Crawford [illegible]. No candidate having a majority [illegible] Adams [illegible] the President.

In 1828, Jackson had 647,[illegible] and Adams 508,[illegible].

In 1832, Jackson, Democrat, had 687,502; Clay, National Republican, 530,189. The Democrats were against the National Republicans for Bank and Protective Tariff.

In 1836, Van Buren, Democrat, had 761,549; Harrison, White, Mangum and Webster, Whigs, had 736,656. The questions were the same as in 1832.

In 1840, Harrison, Whig, had 1,275,011; Van Buren, Democrat, had 1,128,612; and Birney, Abolitionist, had 7,069. The questions were the same as in 1836.

In 1844, Polk, Democrat, had 1,337,[illegible]; Clay, Whig, had 1,299,068; Birney, Abolitionist, had 62,300. In addition to Bank and Tariff, the question of the annexation of Texas had arisen, the Democrats being for, the Whigs against. If the Abolitionists had voted for Clay they would have elected him and prevented annexation. Polk had a plurality, not a majority of the votes.

In 1848, Taylor, Whig, had 1,360,099; Cass, Democrat, had 1,220,[illegible]; and Van Buren, Free Democrat, had 291,263. Taylor was a plurality President. Van Buren was opposed to acquiring any more territory for slavery. The old questions of Bank and Tariff had been greatly modified, and the question of extending slavery arising.

In 1852, Pierce, Democrat, had 1,601,274; Scott, Whig, had 1,386,580; and Hale, Free-soil, had 155,825. The Whig platform said nothing of Bank or Tariff but accepted the Compromise measures of 1850. The Free-soil platform declared against the Fugitive Slave Law, and against the extension of slavery.

In 1856, Buchanan, Democrat, had 1,838,169; Fremont, Republican, had 1,341,264; Fillmore, American, had 874,534. Buchanan was another plurality President. Connecticut, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont and Wisconsin, gave majorities for Fremont. Iowa, Maine, New York and Ohio, gave large pluralities for him. The grand question in this campaign was whether the extension of slavery should be prohibited.

In 1860, Abraham Lincoln, Republican, had 1,860,452; Douglas, Popular Sovereignty Democrat, had 1,375,157; Breckinridge, Slavery-extension Democrat, had 847,953; Bell, Unionist, had 590,631. Lincoln's platform was opposition to the extension of slavery. He was elected by a plurality.

The following was the vote cast for President in 1860 by the States not now in rebellion:

STATES.	Repub. Lincoln.	Dem. Douglas.	Dem. Breck'ge.	Union. Bell.

Wisconsin	86,110	65,021	888	161
Total	1,841,523	1,306,033	412,087	244,802

The total number of votes cast for President at the different Presidential elections since 1824, has been as follows:

1824	352,062	1844	2,698,605
1828	1,156,328	1848	2,871,906
1832	1,217,691	1852	3,142,679
1836	1,498,205	1856	4,053,071
1840	2,404,952	1860	4,680,035

From 1828 to 1860 the vote more than quadrupled, while the population had little more than doubled.—Alta California.

Billy Mulligan All Right.—By the following from the San Francisco Bulletin of November [illegible] it seems that Mulligan was no burglar:

The examination of Billy Mulligan on a charge of burglary came off in the Police Court this morning. The complaining witness, Mrs. Della Lyons, testified to having found the defendant and Peter Daley, the noted pugilist, in the bedroom of her adopted daughter about four o'clock last Wednesday morning; that she fastened the door and windows of the basement leading to the bedroom on the night previous; that she was attracted to the room by the cries of her child; that she found the windows and the door open; and Mulligan and Daley, apparently scuffling, in the corner of the bedroom, the latter in his shirt-sleeves and stocking feet; that she asked them what they wanted there, and Mulligan said that Daley was trying to steal some chickens which were on the premises; that her daughter was sitting up in the bed at the time, very much frightened, etc. The adopted daughter being called, made substantially the same statement. The defense called two witnesses, whose testimony went to show that Mulligan entered the room after and in pursuit of Daley; that he pulled him out from under the child's bed; that he first struck him and then threw water upon him and was endeavoring to arrest and take him up stairs before the child's mother for the purpose of exposure, when the cries of the child brought the affrighted mother to the bedroom. The testimony on both sides having closed, and it appearing that Mulligan had no burglarious designs at the time, Judge Shephard dismissed the case.

A Remarkable Escape.—A remarkable scene occurred on Lake Michigan the other day. The propeller Oneida, on her downward passage, while off Beaver Island, broke her shaft, and the huge mass of iron came crashing down through the timbers, and stove a large hole through the bottom, through which the water rushed with fearful rapidity. The captain announced to the passengers, of whom there were about one hundred and fifty on board, that the boat would go down in ten minutes. A terrible scene of confusion and despair ensued. A boat was lowered; it immediately filled and sunk, being worthless, as too many boats are found to be on such occasions. Another was lowered—the only remaining one—and the women and children put on board, with three men to row and steer it. Those remaining on the propeller, having no means to escape, quietly awaited coming events, looking around for whatever might buoy them up in the water. The vessel had been headed for the island, and after with about five miles began to surge and [illegible]. She went down [illegible] her main deck, when unexpectedly to all, she struck upon a bar, of whose existence no one knew, and there she sat until help came and all the passengers were rescued.

Heroism.—Lieut. Bolrick, of the 59th Massachusetts Regiment, writes:

In the battle of September 30th, there was a young man killed, a member of the 59th Regiment, who used to live in Concord. His name was Bread. He was never in battle before, and he had been enlisted with the [illegible]. He met his death in this way: There was a man shot by a stray shot, it [illegible] nearly [illegible] but if brought [illegible] would [illegible] well. [illegible] to cut [illegible] It was almost [illegible] neither [illegible] he went and [illegible] on his shoulder [illegible] the bullets flew like [illegible] in supposition that we all [illegible] the [illegible] alas! poor Bread was [illegible] man. He laid his burden on the ground, saying, "I may have saved your life, but I have lost my own." He was shot through the bowels, and died very soon after. He was as brave a man as ever lived.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—The Nashville Gazette's dispatch [illegible] the reported abandonment and burning of Atlanta and the destruction of the Chattanooga railroad.

Washington, Nov. 12.—A gentleman from the valley to-day states a large part of Sheridan's army is in the neighborhood of Winchester, while the enemy are at New Market receiving reinforcements. There has been no active military movements recently.

New York, Nov. 12.—The Herald's special says: Information has been received that the rebels in Shenandoah Valley have been reinforced and are preparing to flank the position of Sheridan in order to threaten Pennsylvania and Maryland. Sheridan is prepared for them, having on the 9th given marching orders to the army, which is in the finest and most effective condition.

Dispatches from the front represent the rebels some days ago in force at Staunton, with the intention to move on our lines at once. Forty of Mosby's guerrillas disguised in our uniforms yesterday attacked and captured a small train near Charlestown below Sheridan's army.

New York, Nov. 12.—From Little Rock we learn that Captain White, on the 2d, after a fight of four hours, captured an entire rebel train, with 35 wagons and 200 horses. This is probably one of the trains sent ahead of the main forces by Price.

Late Richmond papers contain proceedings of the rebel Congress. The Judiciary Committee was directed to inquire into the expediency of requiring citizens liable to military duty, absent from the county and not on public business, to return and assist in the public defense, under pain of confiscation of their property, disfranchisement after the war, and other adequate penalties.

The papers say Washington, North Carolina, has been evacuated by the rebels.

"The Herald's Matamoras letter of the 27th ult. says: Cortinas, having become an Imperialist, had been sent on an expedition against his brother, who commands bands of guerrillas. Juarez is at Chihuahua with 2000 troops, and is said to be fortifying and determined to stand a siege. At a recent public dinner at Matamoras, one of Maximilian's officers gave as a toast, "The Union of the Southern Confederacy and Mexico," which was received with great applause, the bands playing "The Bonnie Blue Flag."

Gold was quoted on the 5th at 240@245, and advancing steadily, reached 259 on the 8th; on the 10th closed at 251; on the 12th at 244@245. The depression on the 10th is attributable to heavy sales of gold on Government account.

San Francisco, Nov. 15.—The steamer Golden Age yesterday took four hundred and ninety passengers and $1,097,451 in treasure. The America carried away 730 passengers. The launching of the Camanche was successfully accomplished yesterday and was witnessed by thousands of persons. The only accident which occurred befell John P. Buckley, late State Senator, whose foot and ankle was badly crushed by becoming entangled in a coil of rope. Amputation has since been found necessary. Copious showers of much needed rain fell throughout the State to-day, hindering business dull.

Legal tenders 46@46. No later Eastern news.

San Francisco, Nov. 15.—J. P. Buckley, who was injured at the launching of the Camanche, had his leg amputated above the ankle this evening. B. Mann, from Cariboo, was arrested yesterday for absquatulating without paying his debts. The Eastern line is down. It rained occasionally here to-day but not heavily.

A New Method of Swindling.—A young woman in Jackson, Mich., has been carrying on the recruiting business in an original and highly peculiar manner. She marries a man on condition that he will enlist and give her his bounty. She being strikingly handsome, the man consents. After he is gone she marries another. Four men had she thus wedded and sent to the army. On the fifth occasion she was detected.

The accounts from Caprera are that Garibaldi continues in a very delicate state of health. He can only walk about with the assistance of crutches.

DR. WM. HALL'S

BALSAM.

CURES ALL DISEASES

OF THE

THROAT.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 8, 1861. Messrs. J. L. Scovill & Co.—Gent: I feel it a duty I owe to others to let them know the value of your Dr. William Hall's Balsam for curing of Croup. My little girl, seven years old, had an attack of Croup, and came very near dying! I gave her Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam, as directed, which gave relief in a very short time. We have used in cases of bad cough, with the happiest effect. Benjamin Pitkin, Eighth street, between Main and Sycamore streets. For sale by Druggists everywhere. REDINGTON & CO., General Agents for the Pacific Coast, 416 and 418 Front street, San Francisco.

Beware of all other preparations of the same name. Each bottle of the genuine bears the signature of "D. B. Baker & Co.," Cincinnati. Take none other. Price One Dollar per bottle.

[illegible] all humors and impurities, we assert with [illegible]

BOILS.

WE READ THAT ONE OF the sorest afflictions that the patient Job was called upon to bear was that of boils, and they have been found to be, from that time to the present, the most troublesome and painful of visitors. We have known instances where individuals were sure to have these eruptions break out upon them once a month at least. They show an impure state of the blood, and that humor of some kind is lurking there, and the overplus of corruption is actually forced to the surface of the body, making its appearance in the form of Boils. Now, is it not best at once to purify the system? But you ask, what will do this? We answer, Scovill's Blood and Liver Syrup. It is curing humors in every form, and there is not a State in the Union where it has not accomplished the most astonishing cures! REDINGTON & CO., Agents, 416 and 418 Front Street, San Francisco.

[illegible] purify and cleanse the Blood having it free from [illegible] confidence that there is no better remedy than SCOVILL'S BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP. Give it a trial.

A WORD OF CAUTION.—The bold and infamous confederacy in crime adopted by the youth of this city—which was brought to light night before last—shows a criminal carelessness on the part of parents for the proper care of their children, and they cannot have heard its utterance without a shudder at the exposure. Parents have been too neglectful of their boys here. They have permitted them to run the streets at hours when they should be at home. They have been for weeks without knowing where their sons were, and at last have a realizing sense of the evil effects of such cruel neglect, by finding their children on the high road to destruction. It is true they should shudder at the thought. It is inevitable that some great risks must be assumed, when the younger members of the family are permitted to loiter on the corners, or in dance houses and saloons, until midnight, before they have yet arrived in the teens. Children should be encouraged at home from their infancy up. Their habits should be studied; their companions known, and the employment of their leisure hours noted. They should be warned of chance acquaintances, and told to avoid cultivating them. A little care and attention in this respect would tend to vastly different consequences from those following a wrong course in life. Make home pleasant to the little ones; make the evenings agreeable to them at home; be sure that they are not out after dark, except with trusty guardians, and convince them that they have no friends worthy of their confidence as their own fathers and mothers; then our youth will go shielded into the world as safe as poor humanity can be in a section of pitfalls and perils. It is a maxim good and true, and quite applicable in the present case. Then surely will

"[illegible] careless childhood stray

and when the delicious days have passed Time will fall upon the soul as soft as the autumnal blessings of a well spent life, and the winter of Age will bring hosts of unalloyed pleasure in chronicling the triumphs of a righteous ambition.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS.—We have been favored with calls from several old friends of late, whose faces were as welcome as familiar: Mr. J. M. Kirkpatrick, of Owyhee at present, but an old and well known citizen of Oregon, who has been absent several years, prospecting the mountains of Oregon and Idaho, came down the Columbia river last week, and finds many old friends here, and we shrewdly imagine he has "feet" of consequence in Owyhee. By Monday evening's boat from Salem we see Secretary of State Saml. E. May, and I. R. Moores, Esq., late Speaker of the House of Representatives, who left for California yesterday on the Brother Jonathan. They claim that there is no draft intended at Salem, and they are not leaving on that account. We learn from them that Salem is considered safe, and that the Union men there have concluded not to erect fortifications this fall.

THE MERCANTILE LIBRARY ROOMS.—This place of resort will soon have new attractions for the members. The eastern periodicals have just begun to arrive by mail, and the first invoice of books is looked for on every steamer. The rooms will be warmed and lighted regularly at all times for those entitled to its privileges, and we look forward to a period when this will be one of the most cherished institutions of our State. There should be no flagging on the score of quarterly dues, and members should be prompt in their payments, that there may be nothing to cripple the enterprise in its insipient stages. The trouble and delay incident to starting an affair like this so remote from the literary hub of our universe, should be taken into account, and all complaints considered useless. The Library is destined to become second to none in the regions of these rocky bound shores, and if fostered and nourished in its infancy will be productive of much good.

ACCIDENT AT THE FERRY.—A team and truck, belonging to Frank Hornstrum, one of the most efficient draymen of this city, were lost at the Stark street ferry yesterday afternoon. The truck was loaded with powder for the magazine, and the horses had stepped upon the apron of the boat and proceeded about half way on when the hindmost wheels clogged, and the boat, which was not fastened to shore, pushed off into the stream. At the depth of about twenty feet, perhaps fifty feet out, the truck dragged the horses into the river, and they were drowned with scarcely any floundering. The powder which was in cans, and boxed, floated to the surface and was gathered up in small boats uninjured. The loss of the horses is about $300, as they were a very large, noble span. The river was dragged for the purpose of catching the truck, but all efforts were unsuccessful up to six o'clock. A similar accident happened to a dray and horse in this locality, about five years since, and the vehicle was never recovered, as the bank is almost perpendicular, while the stream has a very rapid under current. To avoid such accidents in future it would be well to have ferrymen fasten their boats.

A SUBJECT FOR THE GRAND JURY.—At the risk of being accused with "modling" about a plain matter of fact, and broaching a very unclean question in decent print, we would suggest that there are almost too many Celestial houses of ill-fame on the prominent streets of this city. The habit indulged in by the Chinawomen of tapping at their windows, to draw the attention of passers, is a source of indecency that should not be tolerated, and measures might probably be adopted by the present Grand Jury to suppress, or at least restrain these dens of infamy. We have our opinion of a man who will stoop so low as to rent them houses in a respectable part of community, for such purposes, and that opinion is better not expressed.

SNOWING UP THE RIVER.—The officers of the O. S. N. Company's steamer Wilson G. Hunt tell us that it was snowing delightfully at the Cascades yesterday. The hill tops around were bleached with the wintery shower, and the big flakes came gently down in the vicinity of the river. We learn also that the Blue Mountains are getting their wintery covering an unusual season; that several feet of snow fell there more than a week since, on the line of the old Emigrant road. The stages will soon have to cross the Mountains on sleds again.

CIRCUIT COURT.—The Grand Jury yesterday returned an indictment against Madison Bledsoe, for murder in the first degree. In the case of Ladd & Tilton vs. Harkness judgment was rendered for the sum of $3,336 43; Rosenfield vs. Rieth judgment for $1,232 77. Judgments were also rendered the plaintiffs in the cause of J. & J. Bergman vs. Ballou & Wood, and John M. Peck vs. Edw. Cook. The cause of Barber vs. Field was submitted to the jury.

NO MORE.—The old steamer Express has been formally yielded to the pressing demands of time, and is passing away! She is one of the things that were, in a steamboat point of view, having been divested of all machinery, and a portion of her upper works. We are not advised as to what disposition the Company have made of the tin horse, its rider and herald, that acted the part of a figure head for this once useful craft.

SHIPMENTS YESTERDAY.—The steamship Brother Jonathan left the mouth of the Willamette yesterday for Victoria and San Francisco. She carries with her from this place a large number of passengers, and treasure to the amount of $2[illegible], of which Wells, Fargo & Co. ship $[illegible]. The produce shipments consist of 3,[illegible] bxs apples; [illegible] sks flour; 688 sks wheat; 52 pkgs butter; 9 pkgs eggs; 13 pkgs merchandise.

HEAVY KETTLE.—The heaviest Cauldron ever cast in the State has recently been made at the Oregon Iron Works, for [illegible] Mr. Higgins's building on Front street, above Columbia, in this city. The kettle weighs about 200 pounds, and is nearly seven feet in diameter at the top.

THE COWLITZ BOAT.—Purser Smith informs us that the steamer Rescue will be ready to resume trips to-day, and will leave at 10 o'clock A. M. for Pumphrey's Landing, on the Cowlitz river.

THANKS.—Capt. John H. Couch, the obliging United States Inspector of steamboat hulls, has placed us under obligations for valuable favors.

AS IT WAS [illegible] LONG FO[illegible].—We saw it without [illegible]. It was towards midnight Monday night and we were wending our way homeward [illegible] rain [illegible] and when near [illegible] [illegible] Sugar [illegible] Two of [illegible] [illegible] Shoal Water Bay oysters [illegible] and we [illegible] are [illegible] yet.

A L[illegible].—The steamer Cowlitz, which has been re[illegible] at the ship yard, will be re-launched to-morrow and immediately fitted up for the her winter business.

PETTY LARCENY.—Patrick Tierney, alias Dublin, was sentenced yesterday before Recorder Moffett to thirty days in the County Jail, for larceny of a coat, before mentioned.

THEATRICAL.—Another fine play is offered for to-night at Willamette Theatre, and we should like to see the Company greeted by a full house.

SEWING MACHINES.—Persons in want of a good Sewing Machine will find Messrs. Grover & Baker's a first-rate article. There is none better. These machines have been before the public for many years, their merits have been thoroughly tested, and the verdict in their favor has been unanimously rendered all over the country.—*U. S. Le Doyen's Sarsaparilla, Yellow Dock AND IODINE ALTERATIVE is the only remedy for invigorating a debilitated and broken down constitution.—Persons of scrofulous habit, suffering from impure blood, nervous trembling, impure digestion, liver disease, lost vitality, should give this great blood-purifier a trial. All the innumerable diseases, constitutional complaints and organic affections are radically cured by a steady use of this medicine.

"A Slight Cold," Cough.—Few are aware of the importance of checking a Cough or "slight cold" in its first stage; that which in the beginning would yield to a mild remedy, if neglected, soon attacks the lungs. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" give sure and almost immediate relief. Military Officers and Soldiers should have them, as they can be carried in the pocket and taken as occasion requires.

THE ATTENTION OF THE TRADE IS PARTICULARLY requested to the above favorite brand of Oysters. Messrs. McMurray & Co. claim to be the only firm that still adheres to the plan of opening the Oyster in its raw state by hand, thus preserving intact its native delicacy and flavor. The superiority of this method over the one in general use, of steaming the oysters in bulk in order to open them, whereby the natural liquor is lost and a manufactured one has to be substituted, is apparent, and recommends itself to all who have given this brand a trial.

KATE MERIDEN;

Or, The Separation.

"Now, my Kate, [illegible] I will hasten home as soon as this [illegible]," and, with a parting [illegible], he mounted the horse by his side, and was soon out of sight. He had left his heart as well as [illegible] on the piazza of their [illegible] Southern home, furnished with all the [illegible] of wealth, and surrounded by all the [illegible] charm the cultivated mind [illegible] that [illegible] the [illegible] word, home. She [illegible] all there, [illegible] his retreating form [illegible] which brightened as two happy-looking children, coming up from a ramble over the garden, saw her, and sprang up the steps to meet her.

"Oh, mamma, come and see the Cape Jessamine," exclaimed the bright-eyed boy, "all in blossom, and so beautiful. Come, mamma, come."

She took the hands of the eager child, and the forms of the three were soon lost to view among the shrubbery.

Mrs. Meriden, the lady whom we have thus introduced to our readers, was the daughter of a wealthy merchant in Troy, New York. She was tenderly reared, and grew up to girlhood dearly loved by the few who understood her, and to whom she opened her whole heart, with its noble integrity and wealth of affection.

The greater number, however, regarded her as haughty and repellant. To the frivolous and shallow-minded she certainly was so, because she despised them, and took no pains to hide the contempt she felt. Her beauty and wealth won her many admirers; but she was too proud for vanity, too noble for coquetry, and not easily won, so one and all were quietly passed by, till, in her twenty-first year, her father involved all his property in an unfortunate speculation, and failed.

Prouder and more reticent than ever, Kate Walton accepted the situation of governess, procured for her by a friend. The children, with their intuitive appreciation of the good and beautiful, soon learned the loveliness of her character; and after long seeking, their mother, Mrs. Meriden, found the key that unlocked the heart of the lonely girl, and they became fast friends. Installed in this position, it was impossible that Kate should not meet the friends of the family, and here she first saw the brother of her employer, Walter Meriden.

Her beauty first attracted him, and, added to this, the warm praises of his brother and sister, could not fail to impress him strongly. For a long time she repelled all advances, and one less determined and impetuous than the handsome Southron would have been discouraged. Long after Kate Walton looked upon Mr. Meriden with favor, she hesitated to become his wife, for she had the Northern prejudice against going to the South to reside; but Mr. Meriden painted his home and all connected with it in such glowing colors that it was not strange she yielded.

"Negroes may be ill treated and miserable on some plantations," he would say, "but you must see how happy mine are. The institution, I know, is a bad one, but we did not make it, nor do I think we are accountable for its continuance. All we can do is to discharge our duty faithfully to these people, and God knows how hard I have tried to perform mine."

So Kate, listening to the love that had won her more than to all else, gave him her hand; and proudly he bore his fair Northern bride to his stately ancestral halls in Georgia. There Kate found that her husband had not deceived her. His dependants were treated with every indulgence and kindness which their position would admit, and were a merry-hearted, happy people. Mr. Meriden was constantly forming new plans for their comfort and improvement, in which his wife was very happy to aid him. Two children had been born to them—another Walter and Kate—beautiful in form and feature, and lovely in disposition, and their lives were passing like a sunny dream. Kate had long ago decided that slavery was not half as bad as she had believed it.

Five years had passed away, and 1860 was drawing to a close. Low, but ominous sounds had long been heard in the political sky, and now they were growing louder and clearer. Wise and clear heads, both North and South, were sadly puzzled, and it was to a disunion political gathering that Mr. Meriden was hastening at the commencement of our story. At night he returned, looking anxious and weary; and when his children came to him for their usual evening frolic, he motioned them hastily away, saying, "Not to-night, darlings, not to-night." It was only till after the sobered little ones were taken to the nursery that he roused himself sufficiently to converse.

"It's of no use, Kate," he exclaimed at length, addressing his wife who sat near him, apparently intent on her sewing, but really noting his every look and motion. "It is of no use to talk and argue to bring things into place again. There must be war; and the bravest must win."

"War, did you say?" and the face of Mrs. Meriden grew whiter than her snowy muslin, and the work fell from her hands.

"Nothing else will suffice," he replied; "and all this talking will only add fuel to flame; it will only make the hatred more bitter in years to come."

"Oh! Walter, it cannot be. It is terrible to think of—brother arrayed against brother, and friend against friend in deadly warfare;—it must be settled without bloodshed."

"I tell you, Kate, that it is becoming impossible. The South is clamorous for her right to form a Confederacy by herself. I think I know the Northern people well enough to be certain that they will not see the Union dissolved without a struggle, and you see the result."

"Nor should the North submit to this. It is unreasonable to ask it;—a dissolution of this glorious Union, cemented by the blood of our fathers! But civil war—the very thought is terrible."

For a few moments both were silent, and then the entrance of two gentlemen who were spending a few weeks with them, having just returned from a hunting excursion, turned the conversation to other things.

As the weeks passed on and [illegible] fresh tidings of trouble between the North and South, Mrs. Meriden grew anxious and thoughtful—so much so as to alarm her husband with fears for her health. [illegible] sought for change of scene and place, but it did little to cheer her. As the months sped onward, she anxiously watched her husband to know what course he would take, and earnestly [illegible] him to remain [illegible] his country [illegible]. As was [illegible] with the South, and at length [illegible] under the Confederate [illegible]. Then Mrs. Meriden formed her plans for the future; but she lingered still, till the thunders of Sumter pealed through the land and roused the nation to action.

Mr. Meriden's business called him from home often, but his stays were short, for his anxiety for his wife was [illegible]. [illegible] in her presence.

It was at the close of a [illegible] in June, 1861, that Mr. Meriden [illegible] from the city and found his wife [illegible] more careworn than ever.

"Kate, what is the matter?" [illegible] holding him from her [illegible] after the first warm [illegible] political troubles are [illegible] you?"

"And if they do [illegible]," she replied sadly.

"Kate, my wife, what [illegible]?" asked the astonished husband.

"I ought to have told you before, but I shrank from it. Many times I have been on the point of revealing my plans, but my courage failed me. Walter, I can live here no longer. I cannot bear to see the flag I love better than life as the emblem of my country's glory, insulted and trampled under foot. I cannot bear to hear the Government I have been taught to reverence as the purest and happiest on earth called despotic and tyrannical."

"Oh! Kate! you will not, you cannot leave me?" and the strong man paled and trembled.

"What can I say, Walter? Since those happy years that we have spent together I have believed slavery excusable, and even desirable. Now I see my error; for slavery alone has brought all this evil upon us. You have taken your stand in this contest, and believe yourself justified in maintaining it. I love you, Walter! God only knows how much; and only how I have suffered in this stern struggle between my loyalty and my affection for you! Oh! my husband! it is not yet too late; let us all go to the North!"

"I cannot!" and the unhappy man bowed his head in anguish. "My honor is at stake; would you have me surrender that?"

For a few moments both were silent; then in a sad tone Mr. Meriden continued:

"It is best that you should go, much as it costs me to say it. Take the children, my Kate, to your Northern home, and when this conflict is over may be there are brighter days in store for us."

Thus they parted—Mrs. Meriden to her home in the North, humbler than her own, but far happier, were it not for her constant anxiety for her husband, and her humiliation that he had espoused the rebel cause; though, proud as of old, she would acknowledge this to no one but herself. Thus they remain—the husband still striving to support the failing rebel cause—the wife and children in the far North, bearing calmly the great trial, and longing for the time when Union and peace shall assert their sway once more over our broad land, and the broken family band be again united.

Oh! this cruel, cruel war! Not only has it made mothers childless, wives widows, and children orphans, but it has severed the holiest ties of life. When will oppression cease, and Freedom, Union and Peace triumph throughout our Nation's borders?

Ashes thrown carelessly from a tobacco pipe occasioned a conflagration a week or two ago, which swept four thousand acres of Long Island land bare of everything like life and property.

Proclamation.

STATE OF OREGON, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
October 24th, 1864.

WHEREAS, I have received a requisition from Major General Irwin McDowell, commanding the Department of the Pacific, acting under the authority of the War Department, for one regiment of Infantry, in addition to the volunteers now in the service of the United States, to aid in the enforcement of the laws, suppress insurrection and invasion, and to chastise hostile Indians in this military district;
